IN MEMORIAM

This conference is dedicated to the memory of children killed in contemporary wars.

It recalls the more than 20,000 children who have died in the Gaza Strip since 7 October 2023 and the 38 children killed in Israel during the terrorist attacks of that same day.

It also remembers children whose lives have been taken or shattered by violence in Iran, Lebanon, Ukraine, Syria, Yemen, Sudan, the Sahel, Somalia, and Myanmar, as well as those who died while attempting to cross the Mediterranean in search of safety from war, drought, and poverty.

According to UNICEF, approximately 473 million children today — one in six worldwide — live in areas affected by armed conflict. For them, there was no democracy, and there will be no education.

School-to-Work Programs (SWPs) are increasingly promoted as policy responses to the challenges young people face in accessing meaningful learning and work opportunities. Yet, evaluations often focus on immediate functional outcomes, capturing only part of their significance. Their democratic and distributive implications also depend on how SWPs are framed, evaluated and governed—on the assumptions they embed, the opportunities they open to different groups of students, and the forms of recognition and participation they enable or constrain. Drawing on capability and social justice perspectives, this panel examines SWPs as policy instruments whose design can either broaden opportunities or reinforce stratification. We welcome contributions that investigate SWPs through evaluation lenses capable of making issues of justice, recognition, and voice visible. Proposals may explore: (a) how SWPs distribute learning and work opportunities across social groups; (b) how teachers, school leaders, educational and company tutors, families and host organisations negotiate responsibilities and expectations in contexts of institutional change; (c) how students interpret and articulate their SWP experiences, bringing their voice to the forefront; (d) how evaluation and monitoring tools illuminate the mechanisms linking local practices to broader regimes of inequality and precarious work. During the panel, the Special Issue Learning for Democracy, 2/2025, “School-to-Work Programs: an Opportunity for Social Justice?”, will be presented, providing a shared framework for discussing its conceptual contributions and empirical insights. This presentation will support a broader exchange on comparative and international perspectives, upcoming research, and future directions for advancing work on SWPs, democratic evaluation, and educational justice.

PCTO BETWEEN POLICY FRAMES AND LOCAL CONSTRAINTS: HOST ORGANISATIONS, COORDINATION GAPS, AND STRATIFIED OPPORTUNITIES

Within a broader European shift toward work-based learning centred on key competences and lifelong guidance, Italy’s PCTO (Percorsi per le Competenze Trasversali e per l’Orientamento - starting from the 2025/26 school year School-to-Work Training FSL) reframes school-to-work programs around transversal competences, orientation and the governance of the partnerships among school, host institution and other stakeholders. With this contribution, we aim to reconstruct how that frame is interpreted in practice and how it shapes the distribution of learning and work opportunities from the point of view of host structures. The study is part of broader national research on PCTO; we draw our evidence from 27 interviews with key informants and host tutors and a two-stage email survey targeting host tutors (2022–2023. N=356). First, we observe a gap between formal alignment with the aspirations of PCTOs and their implementation. Overall, host tutors agree on the centrality of transversal competences and orientation, yet implementation diverges systematically across host organisations. Some organisations, often public/third-sector, cultural or research-oriented, tend to conform more easily and consistently to the transversal competences frame, whereas projects hosted by businesses, especially in Italy’s SME-dominated economy, tend to remain geared toward technical training and job-specific skills. This is not simply a matter of preferences or stiffness: it reflects tensions between educational expectations and the organisational constraints of the Italian economic fabric. Case-by-case adaptations generate sharp heterogeneity in project quality and learning outcomes. The reform reduces project hours and widens a divide between host organisations that can easily align with students’ and families’ expectations and the policy’s broader goals, and less structured organisations, especially micro and small firms, whose technically oriented training becomes less effective when squeezed into shorter timeframes. The result is a two-speed PCTO system that reproduces school segregation and educational inequalities within the host structures. Second, PCTO guidelines call for integrated cooperation between schools and host organisations, as the main driver for customisation and the overall quality of the projects delivered. However, our evidence shows that fully collaborative coordination is relatively rare. Most projects are governed through fragmented or partially integrated arrangements, where responsibilities for design and monitoring are unevenly shared and interactions between tutors are intermittent. Importantly, integrated coordination is less explained by sector, territory, or organisational size per se than by internal organisational conditions, such as strong support, time and capacity to sustain the coordination work required for partnership. Finally, we highlight how contextual factors such as relational and experiential capital, (e.g accumulated organisational experience with PCTO, pre-existing networks) shape also the likelihood of post-PCTO work-related collaborations. Where internal support is scarce, organisational constraints are tight and host structures have less experience in PCTOs, partnerships tend to remain episodic and reactive; where resources, capacity and networks exist, PCTOs are successful. In this sense, the policy tends to presuppose, rather than build, the organisational and relational conditions needed, struggling to challenge pre-existing inequalities and school segregation, but rather mirroring within host structures.

CAN ACTIVE CITIZENSHIP INCREASE EMPLOYABILITY?

Can an active citizenship programme — not originally designed to facilitate school-to-work transitions — produce significant effects on young people’s employability? While school-to-work programs (SWP) are increasingly central to educational and labor policy, their evaluations tend to focus primarily on process outcomes and immediate behavioral changes, often overlooking longitudinal results as well as the dimensions of justice, recognition, and voice that define their democratic potential. The case of the Italian Universal Civil Service (SCU) offers key insights that can enrich this analytical framework. INAPP surveys indicate that volunteers’ employability increases by an average of 12% following their service experience, across gender, educational attainment, geographical area, and family background—suggesting an effect that is widespread and relatively independent of initial conditions. Furthermore, among young people who simultaneously exhibit high levels of both employability and active citizenship, the employment rate reaches 73.7%, compared to an overall average of 57.2%. These findings stem from a research programme aimed at investigating the extent to which higher employability may reflect a more conscious and practiced form of citizenship, moving beyond the dominant paradigm that identifies education and training as the sole relevant drivers of active labour market policies. Through the use of two original indices — OKI-INAPP for employability and ACCI-INAPP for active citizenship — the research provides evidence that appears to support this hypothesis. By integrating these findings with the capability approach (Sen, 1999; Nussbaum, 2011) and the framework proposed in the volume School-to-Work Programs: an Opportunity for Social Justice?, this paper interprets the SCU as a potential conversion factor capable of transforming institutional resources into substantive freedoms and real opportunities. Although not a transition programme in the strict sense, the SCU produces systemic effects on both the probability of labour market entry and civic agency, proving to be a highly relevant empirical laboratory for questioning dominant evaluative criteria. From this perspective, the paper raises two main issues. First, it advances the hypothesis that integrating civic and relational dimensions into transition pathways may strengthen employability rather than divert resources from it: if a citizenship programme produces employment as an indirect outcome, policies that ignore this
